Contents

INTRODUCTION

Political Communication in Times of Crisis 1
Óscar G. Luengo

1. Mastering Minds: the Fortunes of Political Propaganda 5
Ramón Cotarelo

2. Failed communication leads to crisis or crisis leads to failed communication? 17
Anna Potsar
2.1. Introduction: The context of political communication in contemporary Russia
2.2. Theoretical framework: Discursive manifestations of power
2.3. Methodology: Linguistic criticism of the official discourse
2.4. Repressive strategy of communication in critical situations
2.4a. Economic crisis in 2008-2009
2.4b. Political crisis in 2011-2012
2.5. Conclusion

ELECTORAL POLITICS

3. Between political cultures: the European elections and Portugal in time of crisis 39
Paula do Espírito Santo
3.1. Introduction
3.2. Political culture in the European project: a critical review
3.3. The European elections and electoral participation: developments and challenges

4. Experimental Test of Motivated Reasoning: Attitudes towards the Czech Presidents 51
Lenka Hrbková, Roman Chytilek, Jozef Janovský, Otto Eibl, Jozef Zagrapan
4.1. Introduction
4.2. Experimental design and hypotheses
4.3. Experimental Procedure
4.4. Results
4.4a. Attitudes towards Havel and Klaus
4.4b. Confirmation Bias
4.4c. Disconfirmation Bias
4.4d. Prior Attitude Effect
4.4e. Polarisation Effect
4.4f. Sophistication Effect
4.5. Conclusion

5. Between participation and populism. Crisis, political parties and new movements in the Italian public sphere 77
Emiliana De Blasio, Michele Sorice
5.1. Introduction
5.2. Italy between consolidation and crisis
5.3. Democracy in Italy. Party's over?
5.4 New forms of civic engagement: the social movements
5.5. The social movements as agent of democratic communication
5.6. Participation and community leadership
5.7. Challenging the crisis: the Democratic Innovations

MEDIA COVERAGE

6. Media coverage in times of crisis: a comparative study in different European contexts 101
Marta Rebolledo de la Calle, Jordi Rodríguez Virgili, Olaf Jandura
6.1. Introduction
6.2. Theoretical framework: Personalisation in political communication
6.3. Methodology: Media coverage of the last elections in Spain and Germany
6.4. Findings and discussion
6.5. Conclusions

7. The Dialectic on International Relations and Political Communication: The Impact of the Financial Crisis Upon the Nation Image of Germany; A Comparative Analysisin Greek and UK Press 121
Athanasios N. Samaras, Sophia Iodranidou, Myrsini Dogani
7.1. Introduction
7.2. Methodology
7.3. Results: Visibility and Evaluation
7.4. Framing the Nation Image of Germany
7.4a On Frames and Framing
7.4b. Typology of Frames
7.4c. Results on Frames
7.5. Conclusions

8. Framing discourse during the Lampedusa crisis: Victims and intruders in the Spanish press 145
Rafael Durán
8.1. Introduction
8.2. Theoretical framework and methodology
8.3. Findings and discussion

9. The coverage of Corruption in Brazil and Spain 159
Óscar G. Luengo, Nuno Coimbra Mesquita
9.1. Introduction
9.2. Media, Corruption and Democracy
9.3. Case studies: Spain and Brazil

9.3a. The Mensalão affair
9.3b. The Bárcenas affair
9.4. Results
9.4a. Brazil
9.4b. Spain
9.5. Conclusions

INTERNET AND SOCIAL MEDIA

10. Crying politician 2.0. Construction of political soap opera in new media 181
Vita Dreijere
10.1. Introduction
10.2. Theoretical context
10.3. Methodology
10.4. Results
10.5. Conclusion

11. Global crisis - national protests. How transnational was the online communication of the Occupy and Acampada indignation movements? 193
Marianne Kneuer, Saskia Richter
11.1. Introduction
11.2. Definition and Background of the Indignation Movements
11.3. The transnationality of the indignation movements
11.4. Transnationality of the indignation movements' online communication 11.5. Conclusion: National protest, national communication

12. Political Information on Twitter: #elezioni2013 and the role of gatekeeper citizens 209
Roberta Bracciale, Rossella Rega
12.1. Introduction
12.2. Theoretical Framework
12.3. Research and Methodology
12.4. Findings and discussion
12.4a. Political talks and information sources
12.4b. What content (informational, ironic) for what purposes (engagement, endorsement, etc.)?
12.4c. The contribution of citizens to the political discussion
12.5. Conclusions

13. Handling the Eurozone Crisis on Twitter Comparing Germany's and Spain's Political Online Agendas 227
Christiane Grill
13.1. Introduction
13.2. Hypotheses and Research Questions
13.2a. Social Media and Its Impact on Political Participation
13.2b. Analysing the Twittersphere
13.2c. How Twitter Changes Politics
13.3. Methodology

13.3a. Data Sample
13.3b. Data Collection
13.3c. Data Analyses
13.4. Findings
13.4a. Twitter as a Basic Communication Tool
13.4b. German and Spanish Actor Networks and their Characteristics
13.4c. Topical Analysis of Germany's and Spain's Twitter Agenda Via Hashtags
13.4d. Analysis of Political Issues In German and Spanish Tweets
13.5. Conclusion

14. Social networks: a space for political efficacy or cynicism? A case study of 2011 Spanish Electoral Campaign 247
Lidia Valera Ordaz
14.1. Introduction
14.2. Theoretical framework
14.2a. The crisis of democracy
14.2b. Political cynicism vs political efficacy
14.2c. The Internet and politics: improving or degrading democracy?
14.3. Methodology
14.3a. Research questions
14.3b. Hypothesis
14.3c. Operationalisation
14.3d. Sample
14.4. Findings and discussion
14.5. Conclusions

SECURITY AND GEOPOLITICS

15. Communicating public security crisis in Mexico: A comparison between Felipe Calderón and Enrique Peña Nieto 269
Jorge Resina, Tomislav Lendo
15.1. Introduction
15.2. Theoretical Framework
15.3. Methodology
15.4. Findings and discussion
15.4a. Priming: making visible the problem
15.4b. Framing: two speeches, a single reality
15.5. Conclusions

16. The Origins of the Crimean Crisis: Political Communication and Ethnopolitical Conflict in Crimea Until February 2014 285
Andrew Baranov
16.1. Introduction
16.2. Methodology
16.3. Findings and discussions

17. Enforcing "Humanitarian Wars": A Case of Communication Mismanagement 297
Evgeny Pashentsev
17.1. Introduction
17.2. Humanitarian intervention versus "humanitarian intervention"
17.3. A Cordiale Entente of NATO, Saudi Arabia and Al-Qaeda in Defence of Democracy? The wrong message at the wrong time
17.4. Framing the international public opinion over the chemical weapons in Syria
17.5. Conclusions

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL REFERENCES 317